WARREN G. HARDING INDUCTED INTO OFFICE AS PRESIDENT OF THIS NATION WITH SIMPLEST FORM OF CEREMONIES

Former President Wilson, Grave of Face And Feeble in Action, Acts as Escort to The Man Who Will Take Over Multitudinous Duties As Nation's Chief Executive.

ABSOLUTE LACK OF POMP IN SCENE

By L. C. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Warren G. Harding of Ohio, took the oath of office as the 29th President of the United States.

Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts was sworn in as Vice President and President of the Senate.

Thirty-three Senators were inducted into office as members of the 67th Congress.

The inaugural ceremonies were as simple as Harding wished.

Flags were at half mast, reminding the new Republican Administration that Champ Clark, one of the greatest Democrats, lay dead nearby. President Wilson, who for eight years was the head of the government, up to the last minute was busy with official duties.

According to Harding's wish everybody stood during the ceremonies except 30 blind soldiers. Diplomats, generals, consular agents, men and women alike, remained standing during the taking of the oath and the inaugural address that followed it. Following the ceremonies President Harding, accompanied by Mrs. Harding, his father, and other members of the family rode to the White House where lunch was served. Thus ended the inauguration so far as Harding was concerned.

Vice President Coolidge meantime started to work, presiding over a brief session of the Senate called in extraordinary session to pass on nominations for Harding's cabinet.

As a social event the inauguration was a disappointment to those who regard it chiefly as a social affair. There was no inaugural ball. There were three unofficial balls which neither the Hardings or Coolidges expected to attend.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—At 1:19 p. m. today Warren G. Harding of Ohio repeated in a clear, firm voice the oath of office as President of the United States. After the cheering died away Harding stepped forward and extended his arm in an embrace over the great crowd of 50,000 and started his inaugural address.

At 1:15 Harding entered the inaugural stand with Mr. Harding. Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Coolidge stepped to the front of the stand and were greeted with cheers. Mrs. Harding appeared very happy.

The oath was administered at 1:19 by Chief Justice White. James Mayer, chaplain of the Supreme Court, held the Bible which Harding kissed shortly after taking the oath.

Washington, March 4.—We, the people, have a new president, vice president and a practically new Congress today. The last mail had been driven and the last frock coat pressed and everything was in order this morning for the inauguration when Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, took the oath of office for president and Calvin Coolidge, of Massachusetts, the oath of vice president. The weather was unusually fine for inauguration day. It was cold with a heavy wind blowing from the north and west but there was no rain or snow.

Residents of Washington, disappointed over the curtailment of inaugural festivities, made a fair showing with flags and bunting. Five hundred extra police were on duty, reinforced by Boy Scouts, high school cadets, home guards and regular soldiers.

The inaugural program began at 10:30 o'clock when the joint Congressional committee, headed by Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania, and Uncle Joe Cannon, of Illinois, motored to the Willard Hotel and formally took under their escort the president-elect and vice president-elect. The party stopped at the White House for President Wilson. In the first car was President Wilson, President-elect Harding, Senators Knox and Cannon. In the second car was Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Harding, Senator Nelson and Representative Rucker. In the third car was Vice President Marshall, Mrs. Coolidge and Senator Overman, and in the fourth, Vice President-elect Coolidge, Mrs. Marshall and Representative Roavis. Following were secret service men and newspaper correspondents.

OUR NEW CHIEF EXECUTIVE

The Inaugural Speech

Following is the inaugural address delivered by President Warren G. Harding at noon today:

My Countrymen:—When one surveys the world about him after the great storm, noting the marks of destruction and yet rejoicing in the ruggedness of the things which withstood it, if he is an American he breathes a clarified atmosphere with a strange mingling of regret and new hope. We have seen a world passion spend its fury, but we contemplate our republic unshaken, and hold our civilization secure. Liberty—liberty within the law—and civilization are inseparable, and though both were threatened we find them now secure; and there comes to Americans the profound assurance that our representative government is the highest expression and surest guaranty of both.

Standing in this presence, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, feeling the emotions which no one may know until he senses the great weight of responsibility for himself, I must utter my belief in the divine inspiration of the founding fathers. Surely there must have been God's intent in the making of this new-world republic. Ours is an organic law which had but one ambiguity, and we saw that effaced in a baptism of sacrifice and blood, with union maintained, the nation supreme and its concord inspiring. We have seen the world rivet its hopeful gaze on the great truths on which the founders wrought. We have seen civil, human and religious liberty verified and glorified. In the beginning, the Old World scoffed at our experiment; today our foundations of political and social belief stand unshaken, a precious inheritance to ourselves, an inspiring example to all mankind. Let us express renewed and strengthening devotion, in grateful reverence for the immortal beginning, and utter our confidence in the supreme fulfillment.

Progress Proves Wisdom.

The recorded progress of our republic, materially and spiritually, in itself proves the wisdom of the inherited policy of non-involvement in Old World affairs. Confident of our ability to work out our own destiny, and jealously guarding our right to do so, we seek no part in directing the destinies of the Old World. We do not mean to be entangled. We will accept no responsibility except as our own conscience and judgment, in each instance, may determine.

Our eyes never will be blind to a developing menace, our ears never deaf to the call of civilization. We recognize the new order in the world, with the closer contacts which progress has wrought. We sense the call of the human heart for fellowship, fraternity and co-operation. We crave friendship, and harbor no hate. But America, our America, the America built on the foundation laid by two inspired fathers, can be a party to no permanent military alliance. It can enter into no political commitments, nor assume any economic obligations which will subject our decisions to any other than our own authority.

I am sure our own people will not misunderstand, nor will the world misconstrue. We have no thought to impede the paths to closer relationship. We wish to promote understanding. We want to do our part in making offensive warfare so hateful that governments and people who resort to it must prove the righteousness of their cause or stand as outlaws before the bar of civilization.

Association For Counsel.

We are ready to associate ourselves with the nations of the world, great and small, for conference, for counsel; to speak the expressed views of world opinion; to recommend a way to approximate disarmament and relieve the crushing burdens of military and naval establishments. We elect to participate in suggesting plans for mediation, conciliation and arbitration, and would gladly join in that expressed conscience of progress which seeks to clarify and write the laws of international relationship, and establish a world court for the disposition of such justiciable questions as nations are agreed to submit thereto. In expressing aspirations, in seeking practical plans, in translating humanity's new concept of righteousness and justice and its hatred of war into recommended action we are ready most heartily to unite, but every commitment must be made in the exercise of our national sovereignty. Since freedom impelled, and independence inspired, and nationality exalted, a world super-government is contrary to everything we cherish and can have no sanction by our republic. This is not selfishness, it is sanctity. It is not aloofness, it is security. It is not suspicion of others, it is patriotic adherence to the things which made us what we are.

Today, better than ever before, we know the aspirations of humankind, and share them. We have come to a new realization of our place in the world, and a new appraisal of our nation by the world. The unselfishness of these United States is a thing proven, our devotion to peace for ourselves and for the world is well established, our concern for preserved civilization has had its impassioned and heroic expression. There was no American failure to resist the attempted reversion of civilization, there will be no failure today or tomorrow.

Rests on Popular Will.

The success of our popular government rests wholly upon the correct interpretation of the deliberate, intelligent, dependable popular will of America. In a deliberate questioning of a suggested change of national policy, where internationalism was to supersede nationality, we turned to a referendum to the American people. There was ample discussion, and there is a public mandate in manifest understanding. America is ready to encourage, eager to initiate, anxious to participate in any seemingly program likely to lessen the probability of war, and promote that brotherhood of mankind which must be God's highest conception of human relationship. Because we cherish ideals of justice and peace, because we appraise international comity and helpful relationship no less highly than any people of the world, we aspire to a high place in the moral leadership of civilization, and we hold a maintained America, the proven republic, the unshaken temple of representative democracy to be not only an inspiration and example, but the highest agency of strengthening good will and promoting accord on both continents.

Mankind needs a world-wide benediction of understanding. It is needed among individuals, among peoples, among governments, and it will inaugurate an era of good feeling to mark the birth of a new order. In such understanding men will strive confidently for the promotion of their better relationships and nations will promote the comities so essential to peace.

Trade Ties Bind Closely.

We must understand that ties of trade bind nations in closest intimacy, and none may receive except as he gives. We have not strengthened ours in accordance with our resources or our genius, notably on our own continent, where a galaxy of republics reflect the glory of new world democracy, but in the new order of finance and trade we mean to promote enlarged activities and seek expansion.

Perhaps we can make no more helpful contribution by example than prove a republic's capacity to emerge from the wreckage of war. While the world's embittered travail did not leave us devastated lands nor desolate cities, left no gaping wounds, national defense, no breast with hate, it did involve us in the delirium of expenditure, in expanded currency and credits, in unbalanced industry, in unspeakable waste and disturbed relationships. While it uncovered our portion of the world's selfishness at home, it also revealed the heart of America's sound and fearless, and beating confidence unflinching.

Amid it all we have riveted our gaze of all civilization to the unselfishness and the righteousness of representative democracy, where freedom never has made offensive warfare, never has sought territorial aggrandizement through force, has turned to the arbitrament of law until reason has been exhausted. When the governments of the earth shall have established a freedom on our own and shall have sanctified the pursuit of peace as we have sanctified it, I believe the last sorrow of the final sacrifice of international warfare will have been written.

Our Supreme Task.

Our supreme task is the resolution of our onward, normal way, construction, readjustment, restoration—all these must follow. I would like to listen them. If it will lift the spirit and add to the resolute with

INAUGURAL SIDELIGHTS

It was the first Volstead inauguration but although the bars and brass ras were missing the visitors came well prepared.

Thoms R. Marshall, retiring vice president will rest only one day between jobs.

All the Washington shop window display "Mrs. Harding blue."

Crows gathered in front of window which displayed silk hats which were worn by Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson and Stephen Douglas. One of these toppers were a foot tall.

Members of the New York air nil force flew down to Washington bringing a message of good will on Mayor Hylan to the president.

The crowd admired Harding's automobile which was a nifty olive green brougham.

The Red Cross distributed cigar and hot chocolate to soldiers directly in front of the inaugural stand stood the color guards. Tharmy was in the center with two sailors at the corner.

When we take up the task, let me repeat for our nation, we shall give people just cause to make war upon. We hold no national prejudices, entertain no spirit of revenge, we do not hate, we do not covet, we can of no conquest, nor boast of med prowess.

If, despite this attitude, war is again forced upon us, I earnestly hope it may be found which will unify the individual and collective strength, leave us devastated lands nor desolate cities, left no gaping wounds, national defense, no breast with hate, it did involve us in the delirium of expenditure, in expanded currency and credits, in unbalanced industry, in unspeakable waste and disturbed relationships. While it uncovered our portion of the world's selfishness at home, it also revealed the heart of America's sound and fearless, and beating confidence unflinching.

NAMES OF LOCAL LIQUOR SELLERS SOON AVAILABLE

In answer to a number of queries concerning the names of liquor "dealers" and purchasers on the books of Joe Rosenthal, which were confiscated following a hearing before United States Commissioner Smith at Wilkes-Barre, we want to say that The Progress is endeavoring to get a copy of the list for this section and when available will publish same.

Rosenthal is said to have been in charge of the distributing of all the booze disposed of in the central part of Pennsylvania, and was a cog in the big bootlegging ring with headquarters in New York. This ring "distilled" the country and put a man like Rosenthal in each of these districts. He had his sub-agents and after his first trip around and general survey of the district the actual work of selling and distributing the stuff was handled by these sub-agents, through local lookouts or commission men.

These "commission men," together with the amount of shipment and total commissions paid are all set out and specified with the names of the purchasers in each locality.

Revenue agents claim the capturing of these books will be of inestimable value to the officers whose duty it is to enforce the Volstead act, as it not only gives the officers the names of those aiding and abetting the traffic in illicit liquor, but gives the list of consumers and quantities purchased from time to time, which will enable the checking on the sales and make a possible "spring" of search warrants for the searching of private houses and the seizure of any contraband booze found.

POOL ROOM AND WORKMAN STORE ROBBERY VICTIMS

A pair of robbers, one of them a big-footed sun-bet-a-gun, broke into the pool room of Edwards and Davis, in The Progress building, last evening, and got away with about $10 in money and some two or three thousand cigarettes.

Entrance was gained by breaking panel out of the rear door. The thieves ransacked the place after rifling the cash register, but fortunately overlooked a cigar box containing $13 in pennies in 25 cent packages.

The same pair of thieves also entered the Workman's cash grocery in Third street. Entrance was gained here through the transom over the rear door. They were evidently after money, but were disappointed, as no money had been left in the cash registers.

No effort had been made to open the safe and Manager Mattson was unable to say that anything had been taken from the store.

WILSON VETOED EMERGENCY TARIFF BILL YESTERDAY

Washington, March 4.—The Fordney emergency tariff was vetoed yesterday by President Wilson in a message which declared that "this is no time for the erection here of a high trade barrier," and that the measure "would not furnish in any substantial degree the relief sought by the producers of most of the staple commodities which it covers." Action on the veto was expected in the house and possibly in the senate last night with the indications for over-riding it considerably in doubt.

"The situation in which many of the farmers of the country find themselves cannot be remedied by a measure of this sort," the president said. "There is no short way out of existing conditions," he added, "the measure of this sort can only have the effect of deceiving the farmer and of raising false hopes among them."

Harding Takes Oath of Office, Utmost Simplicity Rules Ceremony

By L. C. MARTIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, March 4.—Warren G. Harding today took the oath of office as the twenty-ninth president of the United States.
With ceremonies entirely lacking in pagantry or ostentation, Harding took the oath of office on the east steps of the capitol, surrounded by a great throng, all of whom were standing. No seats were provided this year for any of the guests.
The new president shared the curiosity and applause of the crowd with the retiring president, Woodrow Wilson. Wilson was at least as much in the public eye and thought today as Harding, for the visitors were eager to see the man whose illness had shut him in so long.
Following the induction into office of Vice President Coolidge in the senate chamber, the distinguished foreign diplomats, high officers of the United States army and navy, members of the cabinet, the justices of the supreme court, and the members of House and Senate proceeded to places assigned them on the east portico and steps of the capitol building.
In former years the Senate and House, with their guests, have occupied choice seats in a great stand capable of seating 10,000, built at the foot of the steps, and to the right and left of the presidential rostrum. This year, in deference to Harding's wish for simplicity, the stand was not built. A smaller stand, big enough to hold the president-elect and the retiring president, Chief Justice White of the supreme court, the Bible bearer and the members of the joint congressional com-

Many Cabinet Changes During Wilson Regime

Washington, March 4.—Only four of the cabinet which President Wilson appointed four years ago remained in office yesterday, the last but one of the Wilson administration. One of these four has held two posts.
Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of Labor Wilson and Postmaster General Barleson are three veterans. Secretary of the Treasury started out in the post of secretary of agriculture.
There have been three secretaries of state. William Jennings Bryan and Robert Lansing resigned after disputes with the president. Bainbridge Colby succeeded Lansing.
Lindley M. Garrison quit as secretary of war after a dispute with his chief and was succeeded by Newton D. Baker.
James C. McReynolds became a supreme court justice and was succeeded attorney general by Thomas W. Gregory, who quit for financial reasons. A. Mitchell Palmer succeeded him.
William G. McAdoo resigned as secretary of the treasury for financial reasons. Carter Glass, who succeeded him became senator from Virginia, and was succeeded by Secretary Houston.
Secretary Houston was succeeded in the agriculture portfolio by Edwin T. Meredith.
Secretary of the Interior Franklin Lane quit to enter business. John Barton Payne succeeded him. Secretary of Commerce Redfield resigned for the same reason and Joshua Alexander succeeded him.
Of the present cabinet secretaries, Baker, Colby, Payne and Attorney General Palmer will practice law after quitting official life.
Secretary Daniels will edit his newspaper. Postmaster General Barleson will retire to his Texas farm and Secretary Wilson has accepted a fine appointment.
The plans of Secretaries Houston and Alexander are as yet undecided.

FARMERS OF NORTHWEST FIND RACING DOGS HELPFUL IN WORK

No longer does the big city dog show rule supreme as the spot where the true lovers of dogs may admire the blooded canines. Out in the west and the northwest a new winter sport is each year gaining in interest. Dog races which attract farmers, prospectors, town folks and Indians, Ash-ton, Idaho, last town on the way west to Yellowstone Park and the center of a wide and prosperous wheat, oat and potato district, is an example of the extent to which this sport has been developed. They are now making ready there for the annual races when men and boys of the district, freed from crop duties, will enter and race their dog teams on the big

Harding the 29th President

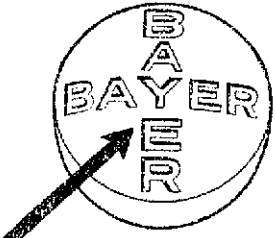

There is some difference of opinion as to whether Warren G. Harding is the twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth or thirty-ninth president of the United States.
Harding is the twenty-eighth individual to sit in the presidential chair. However, Grover Cleveland was twice president, within interval of four years between his terms. For presidential purposes, therefore, most statisticians regard him in this connection as two men and rate Warren G. Harding as the twenty-ninth president. "Whose Who in America," generally accepted as authority, names Wilson as twenty-ninth president.
Counting Harding there have been 39 times that the oath of president has been administered, including presidents who have been elected to second terms and vice presidents who succeeded the ten elected to office. On this basis, therefore, Harding would be the thirty-ninth president.

Wilsons Going Direct To There New Home

Washington, March 4.—When President Wilson leaves the White House today, he will go direct to his home at 2340 S street, the place he and Mrs. Wilson purchased some weeks ago.
The new Wilson home is in one of the most fashionable sections of the city and is not far from the home the Hardings are leaving for the White House. Like most Washington big homes, it sits almost directly on the street and is built very close to an adjoining house.
In the rear of the house is a large lot and garden, which extends back to Massachusetts avenue, and is fenced in by a high concrete wall. Since the Wilsons purchased the house it has been fitted with an elevator.
It is in this house that Wilson expects to do most of his writing on political issues and he may have public statements to make on issues of the day, according to White House officials. He will not, however, do anything to embarrass his successor.
Joseph P. Tamm, who has been Wilson's secretary for ten years, also will stay in Washington, having purchased a house not far from that of his chief. Tamm expects to practice law here.

President Harding Says World Needs Good Old- Fashioned Horse Sense

Views and Personalities of the New Occupants of The White House

By Raymond Clapper
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, March 4.—"Nobody made Warren Harding—he made himself."

With eyes flashing indignation at what she believed to be an attempt to belittle her husband, Mrs. Warren G. Harding snatched up these words to me as she stood in her front yard out in Marion, Ohio, one morning last fall.

The campaign was at its height. Stump speakers were painting the Republican presidential candidate as a puppet going through a public performance that was manipulated from the scenes by clever politicians.

Mrs. Harding, accustomed as she was to the open fighting of a hot political campaign, could not restrain her resentment under what she earnestly felt was a gross injustice to the man at whose side she had struggled beginning back in the days when she was circulation manager for her husband's newspaper.

The new president and his wife are today at the zenith of a career that has consisted largely of hard work. As a boy Harding painted barns for farmers living in his neighborhood in Morrow county, Ohio. As a young man he subbed on the old Marion Democrat and was fired for being too outspokenly Republican in his politics. Early middle life found him struggling with his own little newspaper, trying to squeeze a living out of it. In those days Mrs. Harding, daughter of Amos Kling, Marion's rich man, spent her days at the newspaper office. She managed the newsboys, counted the papers off of the press for them, collected subscription money and kept a sharp eye out for new business. She is a hustler by instinct and as girl insisted on earning her own pin money by giving piano lessons.

Then Harding was elected to the state legislature, he came lieutenant governor of Ohio, was defeated for governor, ran for United States senate and came back and today enters the White House as the twenty-ninth president of the United States.

So Mrs. Harding who had seen her husband toiling through these years could not bear to have him robbed of the credit she felt was due him.

But their success has not made them proud. There is a simplicity in President Harding. He is a plain man from a small middle western town, who considers his rise in the world due more to hard work than to genius or brilliant. And he goes into the White House feeling that way about himself.

"The country has been almost wrecked by great men," he said falling to some of his friends on night recent. "I believe the world needs good old-fashioned horse sense now, more than it ever did before and if I can bring some of that good sense to bear on our problems I believe I will have made a genuine contribution to the country's welfare."

That is the frame of mind in which this man from Ohio passes through the White House doors to day and took up one of the most difficult jobs in the world. It is that frame of mind which sometimes causes people who do not understand him to say he is weak and uncertain of himself. But his advisers know better than that.

"Don't you ever think Harding is weak?" one of them said. "His effort to keep an open mind to hear all sides of a question to give every man an opportunity to state his case are sometimes appear to his own disadvantage."

The inside history of the campaign and the election of a cabinet disclose several instances of Harding's firmness and his mind has been made up.

During the campaign Harding was elected all of one hot summer day in an upper room of his headquarters in Marion with half a dozen leaders. Cox was then starting on a western tour and the Harding side were apprehensive of its effect. Harding's advisers were urging Cox to make a similar trip. The candidate was opposed to it. They argued earnestly. Harding backed up against the wall with his party advisers circling around him. Late in the afternoon a newspaper correspondent came in and said:

was tense. It was apparent that the session had been heated.

"Boys," Senator Harding began, "we have been discussing the question of campaigning speeches, as you know. You can put this in your paper. There will be a few speeches in several states during the campaign. But we are going to stick to the front porch for the most part."

After election, a drive was started to make Elihu Root secretary of state. Harding believed Hughes was the man for the job. Root's supporters worked for weeks before they finally decided that Harding was a more determined man than they had suspected.

Harding's kindly disposition's another of his virtues which often gets him into trouble. He will go to any inconvenience to save offending someone's feeling unnecessarily. He will do anything he possibly can to oblige even those who have no claim on him. No stranger ever approached Harding, wishing to shake his hand, was refused. When Harding was on his way to Texas for a vacation after election, crowds along his route were so insistent that he had to make year end appearances at every stop. It was a Saturday and he was very tired. Arriving at St. Louis about 9 o'clock he received a telegram from a small town a hundred miles or so ahead asking if he would not appear for a few minutes on the rear platform as his train passed through so they could get a look at him. Harding sat up until 1 o'clock Sunday morning so that he might not disappoint the handful of people who had waited several hours for him at this little place.

"A man can't be a crab," he said on another occasion after I had broken a resolve to make no public appearance. "Those people he arranged this little affair and I ought to need the rest, I just didn't have the heart to turn them down."

Harding is loyal to his friend. He owes much to Harry M. Daugherty, of Columbus, Ohio, his most trusted advisor, who has helped him tear through many dangerous passages. After the nomination Daugherty was under fire, not only from the Impeachment camp, but from many Republican leaders who were jealous of Daugherty's position and wanted to force him out of the inner circle.

Harding, discovering this, promptly came to Daugherty's defense. He day Harding returned to Marion after his nomination his neighbors all came down to his house to welcome him back. Daugherty was the Harding spoke a few words of grace. Then turning to Daugherty he said, "Step out here, Harry."

"I want you all to know," he said, "Harry Daugherty," Harding said. "He is the greatest fighter I have ever known and he is the most loyal friend that ever lived."

And Harding has never let a fluff, no matter how powerful, come between himself and Daugherty. There was opposition to Daugherty's going into the cabinet but it got nowhere with Harding.

President Harding goes into the White House today in fine physical trim for the trying years ahead. He was loved outdoor life and has brought his life taken time for recreation. The untimely collapse of his predecessor in the White House has served as a warning to Harding who has taken every precaution to safeguard his health. Having a robust constitution naturally, he has taken exercise with regularity for years. During the campaign and since he has taken as much time as possible for relaxation, mostly on the golf links.

He comes back from six weeks in Florida in perfect health. He worked off much excess flesh. He took on a heavy tan and the lines which appeared on his face during the "best mind conferences" in Marion, when he was unable to get out because of inclement weather, have faded. His eyes are brighter than ever and he winks with a kindly humor.

Of all the sports the new president is most fond of golf. He plays a good average game. It would not be considered a brilliant one. He never fails to make a few holes in par. His game has probably been worse since his nomination than before because he can seldom play without having a trail of curious spectators following him around, an experience which proves disastrous to the best of golfers.

He is fond of fishing, preferring to battle with tarpon and other big sea fish, rather than the smaller river fish.

In his earlier days he boasted a local reputation in Marion as a horse-shoe pitcher, but when someone in Florida heard about it and invited him to participate in a tournament, he begged off, saying he was afraid he couldn't throw the ringers as he used to. He did play some with the policeman who patrolled the Mount Vernon avenue beat in Marion last Summer, when he was unable to get away for golf.

The Harding's will be at the theater as much probably as Wilson was before his breakdown. Both are extremely fond of that form of entertainment.

Mrs. Harding probably will go down in White House history as one of the most interesting women who ever presided over the Executive Mansion's household. She is the hustling housekeeper type who sees to it that everything is done as and when it should be done. When the Hardings were preparing to abandon their Marion home a few weeks ago, Mrs. Harding put on a house apron, a dust cap, and went up into the attic to sort out the old discarded belongings. Visitors passing could see her head appearing at the attic window when she frequently came to throw out old hats and boxes to Frank, the chauffeur, who was waiting on the ground below.

She cares little for precedent and no one has ever been able to find a trace of affectation about her. She has her own tastes in dress, music and literature. Having had six years in the capital during her husband's term as senator, she knows the Washington "society" game from the inside. Ambitious "climbers" who expect to take liberties with the woman from Marion, Ohio, will find that she knows their game and they can expect to make little progress. But there is nothing stern or forbidding about Mrs. Harding. She is open, frank, and utters her pronounced opinions without any assumption of superiority.

Hundreds of women met her during the campaign. Tourists who drove through Marion and the delegations who came to the front porch were as much interested to know what Mrs. Harding was like as they were about her husband.

Any number of occasions can be recalled when she would be hailed from the curb by some passing tourist. Maybe it was a farmer family driving through in a flivver. She had been seen many times to go out, announce herself as Mrs. Harding, engage them in conversation and maybe take the whole family for a tour of the headquarters building.

In Marion she was at home to everyone, neighbor or stranger, rich or poor. She says she intends to be the same in the White House.

Variety

Variety of what? Variety of check-writing devices or protectors. Permit me to show you the steps as they appeared on the market (many fell by the wayside and more are falling.)

THE CUT-OUT. Perforating the amount for which a check was drawn. The perforations were plugged up and new ones made to correspond to the new amount. It's dead.

THE PUNCH-OUT similar to the Cut-Out except the punching instead of perforating (small holes). Likewise it died. The periods were about simultaneous. Each of these stopped office employees but were gravey for the professionals who owned such machines. Something else had to be invented.

CRUMPS. Next we have a device which corrugated, crimped or ruffled that part where the figured amount was shown. It should have prevented changing with an eraser or eradicator but it didn't. The manipulator may smoothen the surface, rewrite and re-crimp. However with a chemical, ink could be removed and still the surface in corrugated form was written on. It died. It blocked the amateur but the professional was amused. Any form of protection tends to give proof of validity and safety.

NOT OVER (A Todd Device) It stamped amounts on surface of checks, without perforating, ruffling or breaking the paper fibre. With safety paper and this machine what do we have? The expert took a special eraser, rubbed out the markings and put the check back for a re-writing. If in erasing he disturbed the paper he retinted it before restamping. We eliminated the dishonest employee but the professional still cut his capers. He beat everything put up for him. Here is where the race against him started in full speed.

Coolidge Takes Oath As Vice-President

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(United Press)—In the presence of a great assemblage of statesmen, diplomats, citizens and citizens, Calvin Coolidge, of Massachusetts today took the oath of office as vice president of the United States and presiding officer of the Senate.

The ceremonies attendant on his induction into office have been fixed by long custom, and in some respects marked in dignity and pomp the inauguration of President Harding, which followed.

Just before noon, Vice-President Marshall called on the Senate to prepare for the ceremonies. Senators thereupon grouped themselves on the left of the vice-president's chair, and in a few moments members of the House headed by Speaker Gillette, arrived and took seats on Marshall's right. Gillette was escorted to a seat directly beside Marshall, and on his left.

Then with great dignity the sergeant-at-arms announced the arrival of high army and naval officials, who paraded to places assigned them. Following came members of the diplomatic corps, ambassadors and ministers, with their attaches, whose brilliant uniforms lent a touch of color to the scene. Next arrived the Supreme Court, with Chief Justice White leading and the justices in their black robes.

At this point the sergeant-at-arms announced the arrival of President-elect Harding. A great applause, were as they the joint congressional committee on arrangements to seats directly in front of Vice-President Marshall.

Finally Coolidge was escorted to the chamber and standing with upturned hand before Marshall, took the oath to uphold the Constitution. This done, the ceremony and the life of the 66th Congress came to an end with the unrooping of Marshall's gown.

Marshall and the retiring Senators became private citizens with the sine die adjournment of the old Congress. Immediately after Coolidge's inauguration was completed, a procession began from the chamber to the stand at the east front of the capitol where Harding was inaugurated.

The Verse Harding Kissed

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Harding introduced an innovation in inaugural ceremonies today when he kissed a verse in the Bible selected beforehand. The custom has been for the Bible to be opened at random, and for the new president to kiss its pages without knowing what verse his lips touched.

Some time ago however, Harding made known his desire to have the Bible belonging to George Washington used, and selected the eighth verse of the sixth chapter of Micah to kiss. This verse reads:

"He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God."

66th CONGRESS IS DONE AFTER BUSY TWO YEAR SESSION

Washington, March 4.—The sixty-sixth Congress after two of the busiest and most eventful years on record, checked out today. It has been working hard daily for the last two weeks on a number of bills. The navy bill was the only one which failed. At the "dying hour" Congress brought death to the Fordney emergency tariff bill. President Wilson vetoed the measure and the House early today failed to override it. The vote was 201 to 192, or 21 less than the necessary two-thirds.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

Miss Esther Twigg left last evening for Philadelphia, where she expects to spend some time.

According to a large display sign in the front window of the room on the corner of State and Thompson streets, the building will be occupied by a 25 cent to $1 store. It will be open for business about March 15.

Joseph Bartelle, who has been working in Detroit for some time, is home on a visit to his kin folks.

Messrs. Charles McClure and George Laing came in on Saturday and spent Sunday with home folks. Both are employed at Red Wing, Cambria county.

Dorsey Black left yesterday for Huntingdon county, where he has secured employment on a state highway job.

Howard Thompson, of Bellefonte, spent several days here this week, going over some of his business interests.

A party of young people, ten in number, celebrated the last (?) snow fall of the season by spending the week-end at the Sphinx Hunting Lodge. "Whiskers" Ammerman played the dual role of chaperon and mascot and only added to the royal pond time by sleeping from the time he got there until his return home, thereby qualifying as a first class chaperon.

"Skeeter," who is strong for sensations, both created and acquired one when he consumed about half a bottle of arnica, mistaking it for something it resembles in looks—but not in taste.

The Wiley Coal Company started a crew of men at work on Monday grading and putting down a siding by which coal can be loaded from the tipples in railroad cars and then transferred to the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

Talking about big, heavy deers that have been slaughtered, old-timers who roamed the woods in 1873 are unanimous in conceding the fact that in September or October of that year, Enos Bloom and a companion named McCracken, killed the biggest and heaviest buck ever downed in the county. When cleaned and ready for cooking, the animal tipped the scales at 203 pounds clean meat. These old woodsmen and sportsmen, who hunted with the old smooth-bore, muzzle loading rifles, would have scorned at wasting a bullet on animals with two little sprouts of horns just protruding through the hair.

Oliver Smith and Al Maurey went over to DuBois on Wednesday night to witness a boxing bout which had been advertised to take place in that mountain city at that time.

The annual yearly congregational meeting of the Presbyterian church was held on Wednesday. There were some 80 persons present. Reports were presented by the different societies connected with the church work. After the business end of the meeting had been finished the gathering resolved itself into a sort of a social, and before the people returned to their homes, a refreshing luncheon was served which was heartily enjoyed by all.

A house to house canvass was made in this town yesterday, soliciting money for the Chinese relief fund. There were enough women on the job to visit every home within the borough limits, and that they did their work most thoroughly there seems to be no room for a doubt. Some of the women were a little timid about presenting their requests, as the people of Curwensville have been approached so frequently of late for money, but they did not falter, and in consequence when evening came and their work was completed, many were agreeably surprised at the amount collected when it was all put together in a bulk.

Petitions are in circulation in this borough asking signatures for the following purpose: "We the undersigned, citizens of Clearfield county, Pennsylvania, respectfully petition that the proposed state highway, between Curwensville and DuBois, shall follow the route of the old Erie pike."

From a business standpoint, should the route remain and be built as surveyed, it stands to reason that Curwensville merchants are going to lose a lot of trade, which at the present time comes to them from Granplan and the section thereabouts. There is another thought to be analyzed by the taxpayers of this already over-burdened debt borough, and that is, of the now proposed route goes via Granplan, and these overhead roadways built from the foot of Walnut street, to a distance beyond where the B. & P. railroad crosses the foot of Granplan road, it will cost this borough an immense sum of money to meet its share of the cost. Where will the money come from? By the issue of bonds and placing the heavy burden to the taxpayers. It is estimated that it will take from $20,000 to $25,000 to repair the now dilapidated paved streets. Citizens think this proposition over.

INAUGURAL SPEECH

no staggering war debts, no swollen fortunes to flout the sacrifices of our soldiers, no excuse for sedition, no pitiable slackness, no outrage of treason. Envy and jealousy would have no soil for their menacing development, and revolution would be without the passion which engenders it.

A regret for the mistakes of yesterday must not, however, blind us to the tasks of today. War never left such an aftermath. There has been staggering loss of life, and measureless wastage of materials. Nations are still groping for return to stable ways. Discouraging indebtedness confronts us like all the war-torn nations, and these obligations must be provided for. No civilization can survive repudiation.

We can reduce the abnormal expenditures, and we will. We can strike at war taxation, and we must. We must face the grim necessity with full knowledge that the task is to be solved, and we must proceed with a full realization that no statute enacted by men can repeal the inexorable laws of nature. Our most dangerous tendency is to expect too much of the government, and at the same time do for it too little.

We contemplate the immediate task of putting our public household in order. We need a rigid and yet sane economy, combined with fiscal justice, and it must be attended by individual prudence in this trying hour and re-assuring for the future.

Reflection of War's Reaction.

The business world reflects the disturbance of war's reaction. Herein flows the life-blood of material existence. The economic mechanism is intricate and its parts interdependent, and has suffered the shocks and jars incident to abnormal demands, credit, inflation and price upheavals. The normal balances have been impaired, the channels of distribution have been clogged, the relations of labor and management have been strained. We must seek the readjustment with care and courage. Our people must give and take. Prices must reflect the receding fever of war activities. Perhaps we never shall know the old levels of wage again, because war invariably readjusts compensations, and the necessities of life will show their inseparable relationship, but we must strive for normalcy to reach stability. All the penalties will not be light, nor evenly distributed. There is no way of making them so. There is no instant step from disorder to order. We must face a condition of grim reality, charge off our losses and start afresh. It is the oldest lesson of civilization. I would like government to do all it can to mitigate, then, in understanding, in mutuality of interest, in concern for the common good, our tasks will be solved. No altered system will work a miracle. Any wild experiment will only add to the confusion. Our best assurance lies in efficient administration of our proven system.

From Destruction to Production.

The forward course of the business cycle is unmistakable. Peoples are turning from destruction to production. Industry has sensed the changed order and our own people are turning to resume their normal, onward way. The call is for productive America to go on. I know that congress and the administration will favor every wise government policy to aid the resumption and encourage continued progress.

I speak for administrative efficiency, for lightened tax burdens, for sound commercial practices, for adequate credit facilities, for sympathetic concern for all agricultural problems, for the omission of unnecessary interference of government with business, for an end to government's experiment in business, and for more efficient business in government administration. With all of this must attend a mindfulness of the human side of all activities, so that social, industrial and economic justice will be squared with the purposes of a righteous people.

With the nation-wide induction of womanhood into our political life, we may count upon her intuitions, her refinements, her intelligence and her influence to exalt the social order. We count upon her exercise of the full privileges and the performance of the duties of citizenship to speed the attainment of the highest state.

Prayer For Industrial Peace.

I wish for an America no less alert in guarding against dangers from within than it is watchful against enemies from without. Our fundamental law recognizes no class, no group, no section, there must be none in legislation or administration. The supreme inspiration is the common weal. Humanity hungers for international peace, and we crave it with all mankind. My most reverent prayer for America is for industrial peace, with its rewards, widely and generally distributed, amid the inspirations of equal opportunity. No one justly may deny the equality of opportunity which made us what we are. We have mistaken unpreparedness to embrace it to be a challenge of the reality, and due concern for making all citizens fit for participation will give added strength of citizenship and magnify our achievement.

If revolution insists upon overturning established order, let other peoples make the tragic experiment. There is no place for it in America. When world war threatened civilization we pledged our resources and our lives to its preservation, and when revolution threatens we uphold the flag of law and order and renew our conservation. Ours is a constitutional freedom, where the popular will is the law supreme and minorities are sacredly protected. Our revisions, reformations and evolutions reflect a deliberate judgment and an orderly progress, and we mean to cure our ills, but never destroy or permit destruction by force.

I had rather submit our industrial controversies to the conference table in advance than to a settlement table after conflict and suffering. The earth is thirsting for the cup of good will, understanding is its fountain source. I would like to acclaim an era of good feeling amid dependable prosperity and all the blessings which attend.

Protection of Industries.

It has been proved again and again that we can not, while throwing our markets open to the world, maintain American standards of living and opportunity, and hold our industrial eminence in such unequal competition. There is a luring fallacy in the theory of banished barriers of trade, but preserved American standards require our higher production costs to be reflected in our tariffs on imports. Today, as never before, when peoples are seeking trade restoration and expansion, we must adjust our tariffs to the new order. We seek participation in the world's exchanges, because therein lies our way to widened influence and the triumphs of peace. We know full well we can not sell where we do not buy, and we can not sell successfully where we do not carry. Opportunity is calling, not alone for the restoration, but for a new era in production, transportation and trade. We shall answer it best by meeting the demand of a surpassing home market, by promoting self-reliance in production, and by bidding enterprise, genius and efficiency to carry our goods in American bottoms to the markets of the world.

An America of Homes.

We would not have an America living within and for herself alone, but we would have her self-reliant, independent, and ever nobler, stronger and richer. Believing in our higher standards, reared through constitutional liberty and maintained opportunity, we invite the world to the same heights. But pride in things wrought is no reflex of a completed task. Common welfare is the goal of our national endeavor. Wealth is not inimical to welfare, it ought to be its friendliest agency. There never can be equality of rewards or possessions so long as the human plan contains varied talents and differing degrees of industry and thrift, and ours ought to be a country free from great blotches of distressed poverty. We ought to find a way to guard against the perils and penalties of unemployment. We want an America of homes, illumined with hope and happiness, where mothers, freed from the necessity for long hours of toil beyond their own doors, may preside as betters the hearthstone of American citizenship. We want the cradle of American childhood rocked under conditions so wholesome and so hopeful that no blight may touch it in its development, and we want to provide that no selfish interest, no material necessity, no lack of opportunity shall prevent the gaining of that education so essential to best citizenship.

There is no shortcut to the making of these ideals into glad realities. The world has witnessed, again and again, the utility and the mischief of ill-considered remedies for social and economic disorders. But we are mindful today as never before of the friction of modern industrialism, and we must learn its causes and reduce its evil consequences by sober and tested methods. Where genius has made for great possibilities, justice and happiness must be reflected in a greater common welfare.

Service, the Supreme Commitment. Service is the supreme commitment of life. I would rejoice to acclaim the era of the Golden Rule and crown it with the autocracy of service. I pledge an administration wherein all the agencies of government are called to serve, and ever promote an understanding of government purely as an expression of the popular will.

One can not stand in this presence and be unmindful of the tremendous responsibility. The world upheaval has added heavily to our tasks. But with the realization comes the surge of high resolve, and there is reassurance in belief in the God-given destiny of our republic. If I felt that there is to be sole responsibility in the executive for the America of tomorrow I should shrink from the burden. But here are a hundred millions, with common concern and shared responsibility, answerable to God and country. The republic summons them to their duty, and I invite co-operation.

I accept my part with single-mindedness of purpose and humility of spirit, and implore the favor and guidance of God in his heaven. With these I am unafraid, and confidently face the future.

I have taken the solemn oath of office on that passage of Holy Writ wherein it is asked: "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" This I plight to God and country.

BRINGING UP FATHERBROOKVILLE COMES TONIGHT TO BATTLE WITH LOCAL FIVE

By DICK LEIPOLD

Yesterday afternoon the Red and Black varsity five ran thru their final practice in preparation for the classic clash with the fast traveling Brookville quintet, and everything is all set for the biggest game of the season.

The Brookville team arrived on the 1:30 train, and with a large following of fans are confident of victory. The week following Clearfield's victory over the Jefferson county seat lads, Brookville traveled to Punxsy and defeated the Ground Hog Towners 37 to 32, or by a greater score than Clearfield won from Punxsy. They have their claim to victory tonight on this fact.

The Brookville passers are a veteran outfit, and have some of the league's fastest players in their lineup, and as they have been traveling at a fast clip all season, this evening's game promises to be another thriller of the same type as the Punxsy-C. H. S. contest, one of those contests that is not decided till the final second of play.

The Clearfield lineup will remain unchanged, Martin and Ammerman at forward; Capt. Neff, center, while Doves and Norris will fill the guard posts.

Brookville and Clearfield are tie for first place, and a victory for either team virtually assures the winner the pennant. If Clearfield wins tonight it will chalk two defeats up against Brookville, and put them in a tie position with Punxsy for second notch, Punxsy being conceded this evening's contest with Reynoldsville at Punxsy. The following week C. H. S. will play the strong New Bethlehem tossers on the local floor, which should result in a victory for the Red and Black here, while Punxsy will travel to their capital, Brookville to play their final league game.

If, however, Clearfield should lose this evening, Brookville will take the top position, and C. H. S. slide down and share second honors with Punxsy and the following week if both Clearfield and Punxsy win a triple tie for first place again would result and necessitate a play-off.

The High School management have prepared to take care of the largest crowd that ever witnessed a basketball contest in Clearfield. Every inch of seating and standing room will be utilized to accommodate the throng. All students will stand in double rows on the west side of the court, and in this manner room for a couple hundred more spectators will be made.

The sale of tickets started at the Y. M. C. A. this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and the doors of the "gym" will not open till 7:30 this evening. Get in line early if you want a good seat.

PHILPSBURG MAN FALLS ASLEEP IN CHIROPRACTY CHAIR

Charles C. Johnson, the Philpsburg barber, and a former resident of Clearfield, is lying critically ill at the Cottage State Hospital at Philpsburg with but little hope for his recovery. The Philpsburg Journal last evening had the following account of Mr. Johnson's illness:

Wednesday morning, Mr. Johnson, who is a successful barber and conducts a shop in the Stott building, corner of Front and Spruce streets, left his place of business to go to Dr. H. J. DeVries' office in the building on the corner of Front and Laurel streets, to take chiropractic treatment, having complained during the morning of pain in his head and the side of his face. Dr. DeVries gave him an adjustment, and while massaging him the patient went to sleep. That was about 11 o'clock. Dr. DeVries reported. Failing to awaken efforts were made to arouse him. His folks were notified, and at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, while still unconscious, he was conveyed to the Cottage State Hospital, where efforts to revive him have proved ineffective.

The hospital physicians diagnosed the case as hemorrhage at the base of the brain. What caused the hemorrhage they were unable to state. An X-ray examination will probably be necessary to determine the matter. Mr. Johnson, it is said, has had fainting spells on two former occasions, but he was unconscious both times for only a short period. He

Is it backache? Have you a dull, heavy feeling over the kidneys? Signs that the kidneys and bladder are not working properly. Urine scanty and high-colored, brick-dust deposits in the water, irritation or inflammation. These are signs that uric acid is stored up in the system to excess. Flush the bladder and kidneys by drinking plenty of hot water, and that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called "Anuric" (anti-uric-acid) tablets. Take one or two before each meal with hot water and see how quickly you are relieved of backache, lumbago, rheumatism and pains and aches. You can obtain An-uric of all druggists or send 10c for trial package to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

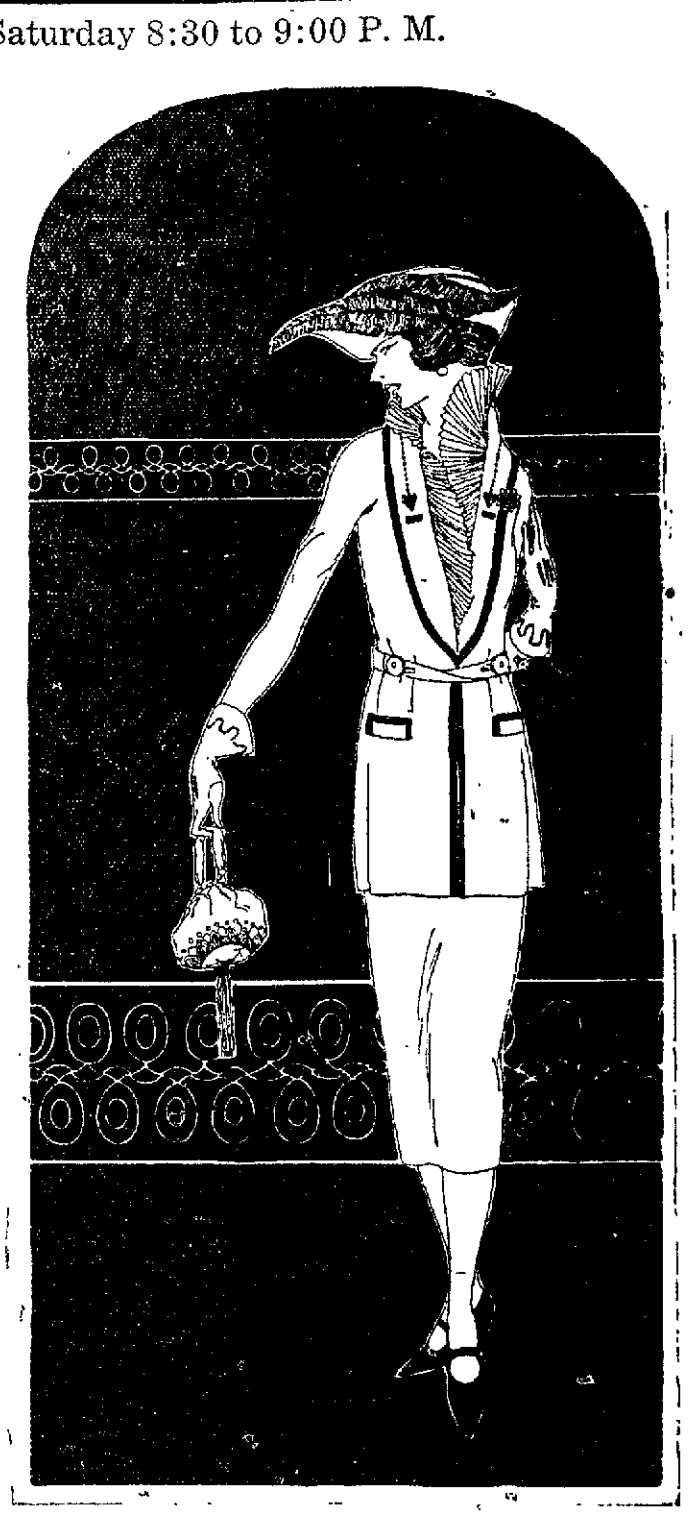

Baby Will Not Mar Your CROMAR OAK FLOORS
At last—a hardwood floor that is hard to mar. Cromar's varnish will neither flake off nor crack. But Cromar has far more to recommend it than that. It possesses the rich finish of fine furniture. And like no other flooring, it comes that way from the factory.
Cromar nails over an old floor in one day for less cost than the kind that takes two weeks to install. Investigate. CLEARFIELD MILL WORK & LUMBER CO.
